Frankfintownship Board Highlights - August 21, 1990

Representatives of G.S. Communications were at the meeting to explain the status and future plans of the company in regard to cable TV service. The representatives were Mr Jake Tasney Mr Ed Brown and Mr. Lloyd Mayhew. The planned expansion areas included Capitol Hill Road to County Line Road, Tuckahoe Road including the balance of Greenhouse Road, Franklin Church Road so about 1 mile, Hunters Road, Frankintown Road, Meadow View Road, Scotch Pine Road and portions of Hickory Central View, and Century Lane. Most of these areas are in a one year planned expansion time period. It is also planned to provide the township with access to the cable within a year from now.

Representing Mr Greg Deimler, was his attorney Mr Jerry Philipson in regards to the Deimler recycling operation on the Ed Dobbins(?) property on Franklin Church Road. A letter from Mr Philipson to Solicitor Enrico, dated August 17th, was reviewed. Mr Deimler, along with this letter, applied for a junk yard permit. Mr Dobbins(?) has previously applied for junk yard permits and/or transfer of permit from his brother Michael (who had a permitted yard until he closed it). The township filed with the county courts to stop junk yard activity for both Deimler and Dobbins(?) until a permit was issued, a hearing had been scheduled and has been continued to October 17, 1990. Mr. Deimler, at his letter and at this meeting, agreed that he will place all vehicles and material behind every inside the building or within closed in stacks in the rear of the building. The board voted to table action on the application of Greg Deimler for a junk yard license until such time as the decision on the Dobbins(?) hearing on October 17th has been issued by the Judge, with the board taking the Deimler application under consideration after that date. Mr. Deimler agreed that he can operate until that time under the conditions stipulated by the now standing court order in the manner and if Mr Deimler requests his fee returned, he will need to reapply to the township for the requested permit.

Mr and Mrs. Eric Engle and their Engineer, Timothy Knoebele, were at the meeting concerning their present boiling tank permit. They said they will need additional time due to the time consumed in designing, making application and receiving permission from DER for the installation of a package plant on their property to alleviate their sewage problems. SEO Grove recommended that the present holding tank permit be extended, due to the efforts and circumstances of the Engles. The board authorized the SEO to re-issue the holding tank permit for Eric and Mindie Engle for the period ending August 1, 1991

The board adopted a resolution 1-8 21-90 to revise the township sewage comprehensive plan to include the Engle sewage planning module and to submit it to DER.

The board adopted a resolution 2-8-21-90 to revise the township sewage comprehensive plan to include the Ted Laukemann Jr. sewage planning module and submit it to DER.

The board voted to disapprove the Ted Laukemann Jr Subdivision plan due to the nonreceipt of approval of the sewage planning module from DER and due to the comments of the township engineer in his review letter

Engineer and SEO Grove reported that the well testing program is in progress at this time. This is being done by Kellogg Environmental Services in conjunction with the Act 537 rewrite program.

Solicitor Enrico reported that his office has filed responses to pleadings filed by Mr Lutz against the township and that he, on behalf of the township, has filed a counterclaim against Mr Lutz

The board approved the junk yard application of Harry Fox Sr and authorized the issuance of a license to operate a junk yard for the period July 1, 1990 to June 30, 1991

The supervisors decided to send a letter to Jesse Kolb of Western Road notifying him to remove his raspberry bushes from the drainage easement area within the next 15 days.

In regards to the recreation area and ball fields, it was decided to notify Dillsburg Youth Baseball of the following. (1) the board is agreeable to field #1 being turned into a field to be used by 13 and 14 year olds (not to be used by players older than that age group) (2) the township will make field #1 into an "all ground" infield and the township will "peel off" the grass and level. (3) Dillsburg Youth Baseball will make determination as to the pitcher's mound. (4) Township will not be opposed to temporary fencing for field #1. (5) New field #3 - township will provide back stop - this field will be 300 feet from the home plate of field #1 and is to be in the area designated by yellow stakes.

The board voted to approve John O. Hoffman as the Franklin Township representative to the Northern York County Task Force (for recreation).

The board voted to advertise for bids on a 1990 or 1991 one ton dump truck with automatic transmission, with and without trade in on the present township 1977 one ton dump truck, with opening of bids at the next board meeting on September 18, 1990

Family unites to help grandmother

By Chris Hoho

Very few teens have to experience an organ transplant. Although I didn't actually receive an organ, my family and I experienced it vicariously through my grandmother when she was told that she needed a kidney transplant to save her life.

My grandmother was hospitalized for almost 120 days over two years. At first we had no idea of the serious of her condition.

After going in and out of the hospital during the Christmas holiday, it appeared that she needed more than massive hospital treatment. It was then that she was told that she would need a kidney transplant.

The thought of a transplant seemed a bit scary to all of us especially my grandmother. After being pressured with two options to select a donor from the family or from a waiting list the doctors agreed that a family donor would be the quicker method.

In preparation for the transplant, my three uncles, three great aunts, my mother, and my grandparents went to Philadelphia to meet with the specialists. They were told in detail about the risks and procedures of a kidney transplant operation.

At this point our family finally realized just what was really happening. My grandmother was going to be part of a very serious operation which would determine her health for the rest of her life.

It takes time quickly at our household when my mom, Vicki Fiske, was selected as the donor. But approximately one month later, the doctors explained they didn't want to involve another family member. They suggested that my grandmother be placed on the waiting list for a cadaver donor, meaning donation from a person using a living donor for the transplant.

After months of hospital and doctor visits, it was all coming to a bitter sweet climax. It seemed risky, but we knew that a transplant was the only answer.

It was then that the family discovered that everyone would have to pull together and help my grandparents in a situation such as this. stress is common and often overbearing. The only way to beat that stress is to give a helping hand to anyone who needs it

The day of the actual transplant was very eventful for me. Unknown to me, my mother left at 12:30 a.m to go with my grandparents to Philadelphia for the operation. When I woke up, my dad told me that an organ became available and that my mom were at Philadelphia with my grandparents.

I was a little confused I had expected a much longer waiting period It had only been one month since my grandmother's name was placed on the waiting list.

At the time, I was working at the Capitol and with my mom, so I didn't know how this would affect my work schedule.

Dad took off two hours from his job that morning to drive me into Harrisburg. Although it was difficult, I worked a full day, not knowing how the operation went.

When Mom came home that evening, I finally learned that everything went smoothly.

I think everyone expected a miraculous recovery right after the transplant. We were all wondering why my grandmother was still very sick a week or two after the operation. She stayed in the hospital for three and a half weeks with infections and a slow rejection episode

Mom says she felt a bit guilty and agitated during grandmother's ordeal. Mom believed that if she had donated her kidney, these complications may not have occurred However, I was relieved that Mom didn't go into the hospital because when I would have worried about her as well.

Family and friends scheduled their visits to Philadelphia accordingly so that my grandmother had visitors every day. My mom and sister went to see my grandmother every weekend. My dad and I didn't go quite as often because of prior commitments and my summer job

After my grandmother came home, we all thought our job was almost over Little did we know the work that was ahead for my grandmother. He had to manage her doctor's appointments, medication, and her up-and-down health.

In addition to all my relatives, my grandparents' neighbors and friends gave my grandfather a lot of help with the cooking, cleaning, and other household chores He already had the financial worries that go along with a transplant.

Our family seemed to have gained a sense of trust in one another over this two-year period. We all unit for one cause: to help my grandmother It's a shame that something like this had to happen to bring everyone closer together. But it was great to see everyone care so much.

It's even more wonderful to see my grandmother smiling and laughing again.

Transplant does not put damper on recipient's future outlook on life

By Mary Lou Bytof

The phone rang shortly after midnight

"This is Thomas Jefferson hospital. We have a kidney for your wife. Make it as soon as you can, but don't break any speed laws," the voice instructed a sleepy Donald Gasswint of Roseville.

At 12:40 a.m June 21, 1989, Donald and Charlotte Gasswint left their home for Philadelphia, where a second chance on life awaited Mrs Gasswint.

With their daughter Vicki Fisher of Mechanicsburg driving, the family arrived at the hospital at 3 a.m Eight hours later Mrs Gasswint was in surgery.

"The kidney problem came on suddenly," Mrs Gasswint recalls. During the two years before the transplant she had spent a total of 120 days in the hospital

In December 1988, doctors at York Memorial Hospital told Mrs. Gasswint that her kidneys were deteriorating

She was placed on peritoneal dialysis, which, for the part, kept her homebound.

"In the beginning, it sounded so hard, but I got used to it," she says of the procedure which she had to perform four times a day for six months.

"I hardly could go anywhere," she laments. She says she was especially disappointed when the stringent schedule prevented her from traveling up-state for a wedding

Able to make short trips Mrs Gasswint kept her job as a driver for Slough Transportation until two weeks before the transplant. She says she enjoyed driving a van load of learning disabled children to and from the Capital Area Intermediate Unit.

"As the driver, it was her job to clean the vehicle at the end of each day She recalls how glad she was when she was given a new van to drive, since it was easy to maintain.

On the last day of work, however, she says she was not able to clean the vehicle. "I was too exhausted," she recalls.

"I would like to go back to the job someday," she exclaims. "Right now, though, I'm too weak."

The kidney ailment was a complication of diabetes mellitus, which Mrs Gasswint developed 27 years ago during her last pregnancy She has been taking insulin injections since 1970.

Although she continues to suffer from various common complications of the diabetes, she says the new kidney is functioning well.

Charlotte Gasswint, kidney transplant recipient, and her husband Donald, look forward to a trip to Disneyworld with their family next June. It will be a well deserved vacation following a 3 1/2 week stay at Thomas Jefferson Hospital in Philadelphia recuperating from the operation.

Fortunately, yet unusual, only a month had passed from the time her name was placed on the transplant list, to the day of surgery.

Many family members were apprehensive about the transplant, Mrs. Gasswint recalls.

"When I went for that surgery, I was so sick. I knew I had to have it, so I never worried about it," she says.

"I'm not one to sit and worry I never did," she adds.

After the transplant, she spent 3 1/2 weeks in Thomas Jefferson Hospital. During that stay, either a family member or friend had visited her every day. she says. "I never expected that," she adds.

Although she does not know the identity of the donor she knows that the kidney came from a 50-year-old Delaware woman who was killed in an automobile accident.

The transplant she says had some difficulty getting the transplanted organ to function. Mrs. Gasswint recalls.

"To get it to start working the doctors said they were giving me a serum from a mouse," she recalls. Although that injection made her gravely ill and produced a high fever, the kidney began to function

"That, I did worry about," she says.

Today, although she tires easily, the 57-year-old transplant recipient says, "Now, I'm supposed to do everything."

The transplant certainly has not put a damper on her sense of humor. Speaking of physical activities she replies, "I can't sit anywhere!"

She says she has attended sporting events in which her two oldest grandchildren participate.

She also likes to go out to eat "It's probably the best morale booster I have," she adds.

Mrs Gasswint credits her family for their assistance throughout her illness and recuperation.

The Gasswints have four children: Michael of Roseville, Vicki Fisher of Dillsburg, Kevin of Lemoyne and Mark of Mechanicsburg.

Their grandchildren are Christopher 16, and Angela 12 Fisher and Tyler Gasswint 1 1/2

Mrs Gasswint says she is looking forward to taking a trip to Disneyworld next June with her family

Recently the transplant recipient was reminded how lucky she was to have received the kidney in time. The Delaware Valley Transplant Center had sent her a note asking her to inform people of the need for organ donations. They asked her to take the message to her church

According to Mrs Gasswint, the preacher at Calvary United Methodist Church in Dillsburg, put the message in the church bulletin

"After I had my transplant, they said they didn't have any for three weeks over there (Thomas Jefferson Hospital), she says
